MOST DELEGATES TO U.S. ZIONIST CONVENTION OPPOSE PARTITION

A resolution characterizing the London conference on Palestine as a "dilatory device" invented by the British government to "deflect public criticism" of its Palestine policy was passed by the Zionist Organization of America at Atlantic City, N.J.

The resolution, which was recommended to the delegates by the convention's political committee, further questioned the wisdom of Jewish participation in the London conference, declaring the convention "confident that representatives of the Jewish Agency for Palestine will continue to decline an invitation to this or any conference unless there is adequate assurance that the purpose of the discussion will be the implementation of the legally established rights of the Jewish people, the furtherance of immediate immigration and the early establishment of a Jewish state."

With an oblique reference to the Jewish Agency's committing itself to a partition plan for Palestine, opposed by the majority of delegates at the convention, the resolution continued, "Such negotiations as may be entered upon by the Jewish Agency should be conducted in such a manner as to avoid any advance commitments on behalf of the Zionist movement."

In addition, the resolution declared the manner in which the convention believed any British White Paper on Palestine should be considered for Jewish considerations, including those transported by the British to Cyprus.

Dr. Abba Hillel Silver was re-elected president of the organization. He is also executive chairman of the American Zionist emergency council.

Dr. Silver called on the World Zionist Congress, scheduled to meet Dec. 9 in Basle, Switzerland, to disavow the action of the Jewish Agency Executive in consenting to discuss the partitioning of Palestine. He urged the delegates to continue their efforts for the establishment of a Jewish state in the whole of Palestine. He asserted that the Zionists in the United States must support the settlers in Palestine "against the brutal attempts of the mandatory government to liquidate the Jewish national home."

"We must make possible continued Jewish immigration in Palestine regardless of cost," Dr. Silver said. "The power which keeps these immigrants out of the Jewish national home is an illegal power and must be resisted in every way.

"The Government which complains of terror in Palestine must understand that it alone is responsible for that terror. We must carry on in every part of the world and especially in this country an intensified campaign of education to inform the world of the organized conspiracy of the present British Government to nullify our rights in Palestine, and physically to destroy whatever Jewish labor and sacrifice have through the years built in that country, and build up ours."

Appeals To Jews To Isolate Terrorists

Palestine Jewry's Parliament — Vaad Leumi, or National Council — joined forces with the Inner Zionist Council in outlawing political terrorism by appealing to Jews in Palestine to isolate terrorist groups and deprive them of encouragement and support.

The new statement warned Palestine Jews of the "grave danger inherent in such acts of madness" as attacks upon the Royal Ulster Rifles at a road bridge outside Jerusalem and the blasting of the Jerusalem railway station.

Vaad Leumi called these bombing or mining assaults "a heinous and unforgivable crime." This appeal, or warning, is part of an "educational" campaign in which Jewish institutions have embarked to segregate political extremists.

A spokesman for the Jewish Agency said "the Jewish Agency and other Jewish authorities will

Wise Scored For Support Of Candidates

The action of Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, for many years a leader in the Zionist movement, in urging the election of the Mead-Lehman ticket was denounced by the Greater New York Zionist Actions Committee, speaking through two of its principal officers.

Louis Segal, treasurer, and Rab-

Transfer Officer For Talk On Policy Toward Jews

The Palestine Government announced that Lieut. Col. Richard H. L. Webb had been removed from command of the First Battalion of the Argyll and Sutherland Highland Regiment for having expressed "opinions which were both unauthorized and unofficial."

This decision was taken as a sequel to Colonel Webb's action in having a number of British, United States and Palestinian newspaper men taken from the spot where they were watching the troops "screen" Jewish householders to battalion headquarters. The correspondents said Colonel Webb had interviewed them individually and made remarks of a political character.

Observers believed that the rare action of relieving a battalion commander of his duties as a result of conversations with newspaper men was occasioned by his alleged remark. He was said to have referred to Lieut. Gen. Sir Evelyn Barker, former commander in Palestine, as "Little Barker" and to have declared that the next commanding general, Maj. Gen. G. H. A. MacMillan, would know better how to handle the Palestine Jews.

Colonel Webb was quoted as having said also that it was the Army's policy to make "as big a nuisance of itself" as possible to Jews in Palestine so they would turn against extremists. He was said to have admitted that his men had used rifle butts on Jews and had done "a spot of looting."

SULZBERGER CHARGES ZIONISTS PUT STATEHOOD BEFORE REFUGEE HAVEN

Arthur Hays Sulzberger, publisher of The New York Times, called for a reversal of the Zionist policy that puts statehood first and refuge for Europe's displaced Jews last, declaring that both aims have thus been jeopardized.

"It is unfair to carry on this political controversy at the expense of the miserable tenants of the D.P. Camps," Mr. Sulzberger emphasized. "Nor will the philosophical and political ideal of Jewish statehood die by reason of delay if it deserves to live; but refugees will die if humanity too long delays their rescue."

Mr. Sulzberger spoke at a dinner meeting at Read House in Chattanooga, Tennessee, which marked the close of a two-day celebration of the eightieth anniversary of Mizpah Congregation. Mrs. Sulzberger's paternal grandfather, Julius Ochs, was one of the founders of the Congregation and served as its lay Rabbi for ten years. Her father, Adolph S. Ochs, late publisher of The Times, was the donor of its synagogue, a memorial to his parents, Julius and Bertha Ochs.

The Rev. Dr. John Paul Pack, pastor of the First Christian Church of Chattanooga and chairman of the Chattanooga Chapter of the National Conference of Christians and Jews, brought greetings from his church and the Conference. Rabbi Abraham Feinstein, rabbi of the Congregation, presided. One of the principal addresses was delivered by Dr. Julian Morgenstern, president of the Hebrew Union College of Cincinnati.

Prefacing his remarks on the desperate situation of the displaced persons, Jewish and non-Jewish, whom he saw at first hand and "whose plight would move the hearts of men of stone," Mr. Sulzberger quoted from the famous letter of General Washington on "toleration" addressed to the Hebrew Congregation of Newport, R.I., at a time when two of Mr. Sulzberger's forbears were Wardens and Rabbi of the Congregation.

Mr. Sulzberger said that General Washington's ideal of rights being enjoyed as "rights" and not as "the indulgence of others," in which Government gave to persecution no sanction, and in which government claimed only the demeaner of good citizens, "had worked well for us as citizens of the United States." But when applied to conditions confronting the world today, he added, it appeared an ideal "which, to many now, seems remote and unattainable."

Two Jews and two Arabs were killed on November 2 in northeastern Palestine, although clashes between Jews and Arabs had been rare in the country since 1939.

The trouble arose while Zionist settlers, building a new village, Neot Mordecai, or Mordecai's Oasis, near the Syrian and Trans-Jordan borders, were plowing. At 6 A. M. a large number of Arab villagers gathered and tried to prevent the Jews from working a small section of the fields.

The settlers claimed priority rights. The land legally belongs to the Jewish National Fund. It is near Kfar Blum, a village named for Leon Blum, former Premier of France, in the Plain of Huleh.

During the fracas an Arab fired a pistol, killing a young Jewish settler from Turkey and a constable of the Jewish settlement police. Supernumerary constables are recruited by the British Palestine administration to protect outlying villages.

The Jews returned the fire, killing two Arab farmers. In the subsequent affray eleven Jews were wounded. An Arab woman was seriously injured. (Press services quoted the police as having said that only one gun had been used in the clash but that knives and clubs had also been used.) British troops and police arrived and dispersed the Arabs.

"The Greater New York Zionist Actions Committee notes with sharp resentment a statement issued by Dr. Stephen S. Wise, which couples his support of the Democratic candidates with an evident attack upon our position and activity," the statement said.

"Dr. Wise refers to us and to other like-minded groups as 'those who lightly or disingenuously urge opposition to Administration candidates throughout the country on the alleged ground of the Administration's indifference to the fate of the DP's and its failure to secure their admission to Palestine.' Unfortunately the Administration's failure to secure their admission to Members of the Columbians leaped to their feet with cries of "throw him out." Detectives cleared the hall.

Emory C. Burke, president of the Columbians, and Homer L. Loomis, secretary, addressing approximately 250 members, assailed Communists, Negroes, Atlanta newspapers and Jews.

In explaining the organization's antagonism toward the Jews, Loomis said:

Statement On The Status Of The Palestine Problem

By Dr. Nahum Goldmann, Member Of The Executive Of The Jewish Agency For Palestine

During the past two months, formal negotiations and informal talks have taken place in London looking towards a solution of the Palestine problem. Up to now, these discussions have brought no constructive result. There is a complete stalemate and, while this stalemate persists, Britain continues to administer Palestine on the basis of the White Paper of 1939. Jewish immigration to Palestine is barred; immigrants are diverted to Cyprus; the duly elected leaders of the Jewish community are interned without trial; and many Jewish settlements are willfully deprived of necessary instruments of self-defense. Tension in Palestine is therefore increasing. The situation there is certain to deteriorate further unless the stalemate is ended and a reasonable solution found.

The discussions which we of the Jewish Agency Executive had with members of the British Government were concerned with two problems; first, the establishment of a sound basis for Jewish Agency participation in the formal Palestine Conference (in which only Britain and the Arab States have participated hitherto) and, second, preliminary exploration of a definitive solution of the Palestine problem.

Two basic conditions were stipulated by the Jewish Agency as prerequisites for its participation in the formal Palestine Conference. These were: first, agreement on such a basis of discussion as might have some reasonable prospect of a fruitful result, and second, freedom in the exercise of the elementary right of choosing our own spokesmen. The British Government continued to refuse us the right to name our own spokesmen.

Because of differences on these questions, the Jewish Agency continues to find it impossible to participate in the formal Palestine Conference. World Jewry has shown a most gratifying solidarity with the Jewish Agency on this issue. All of the world Jewish organizations invited to attend the conference by the British Government, and all the individuals who received personal invitations, followed the leadership of the Agency in refusing to attend the Conference on the presently offered, unsatisfactory basis.

In our exploration of the basis for a definitive solution of the Palestine problem, the Jewish Agency made a supreme concession in an effort to break the present stultifying deadlock. First, we made it clear that we would not even discuss the Morrison plan formally; the plan is totally unacceptable to us because it deprives the Jewish National Home of 95 per cent of the land of western Palestine, does not allow freedom of [illegible] declared our readiness to enter formal negotiations on the basis of a partition of Palestine which would give the Jewish people a State of their own in an adequate area and give the Arabs their own State in another part of the country. The far-reaching character of this concession can only be appreciated when it is realized that Palestine has already once, since the Balfour Declaration, been subjected to one partition, to the great disadvantage of the Jewish people. Already in 1922 more than three-quarters of the total area originally designated for the Jewish National Home was cut off to form the exclusively Arab land of Transjordan.

Nevertheless, the Jewish Agency now decided to accept the supreme sacrifice involved in another partition. It was not out of choice or a conviction of equity that we came reluctantly to this final concession but in a desperate effort to open the way for immediate large-scale Jewish immigration so as to save the hundreds of thousands of Jews in the camps in Europe and in Eastern European countries where they cannot live.

Until now, even this supreme sacrifice on our part has not budged the British Government. We know that very important Arab leaders would be ready to consider a partition scheme if they knew that they had to accept a compromise. Naturally, however, no Arab leader will express his willingness to accept a compromise so long as the Arabs feel that they can get 100 per cent of their demands from the British or that, if no solution is reached, the present state of affairs will continue indefinitely, with the practical stoppage of Jewish immigration.

The key to a solution was and is in the hands of the British Government. If they really want a definitive agreement acceptable to all, as they say, they can get it by indicating to the Jewish [illegible] either to comply with its Mandatory obligations with respect to Jewish immigration and the Jewish National Home or to press firmly for an equitable alternative solution. The British Government has shown no firmness in pressing the Arabs to accept a reasonable compromise. All British strength rather is concentrated on mobilizing the British fleet and army to prevent Jewish immigration and to maintain in Palestine a rule in permanent and flagrant violation of Britain's Mandate. So long as this remains the character of British policy, all the talks and negotiations are meaningless.

I have not yet given up the hope that the British Government will, at the last moment, terminate the policy of flagrant violation of its Mandatory obligations which has prevailed since 1939 and will recognize the just and internationally established rights of the Jewish people in Palestine. For a long time, the British Government delayed action claiming that they wanted the United States to assume some responsibility in the picture. The Government of the United States has now indicated its support of the solution suggested by the Jewish Agency. The last statement of President Truman, for which the Jewish Agency Executive in London and Jerusalem expressed their gratitude and satisfaction, indicates clearly that the United States is ready to assume political, technical and financial responsibility.

There is no excuse whatever for the present repressive and dilatory tactics of the British Government with regard to the Jewish National Home in Palestine. If these tactics are continued, [illegible] compromise solution of the Jewish Agency, nobody can accuse the Jews of intransigence. But there is a limit to patience and willingness to compromise. Unless the British Government displays a new firmness in attempting to bring about a just solution, we have many years of bitter struggle before us in Palestine. The consequence will be tragic to all concerned.

300,000 WOMEN RAISED $8,727,583 FOR U.P.A.

Three hundred thousand Jewish women in the United States have contributed $8,727,583 toward the nation-wide United Jewish Appeal goal of $100,000,000 during the first nine months of 1946, Mrs. David M. Levy, chairman of the Appeal's national women's division, reported in New York.

Of the total cited, Mrs. Levy said $3,560,000 had been contributed by women in Greater New York. She pointed out, however, that the statistics gave only a partial indication of the "overwhelming cooperation" by Jewish women throughout the country.

A NON-JEW LOOKS AT ZIONISM AND PALESTINE

ADDRESS TO THE BROTHERHOOD OF TEMPLE EMANU-EL, IN MONTREAL

By The Very Reverend Kenneth C. Evans, Rector of Christ Church Cathedral in Montreal; Dean of Montreal; former Thayer Fellow at the American School of Oriental Research in Jerusalem, Palestine; and former Dean of Divinity at Trinity College, University of Toronto.

First of all I wish to express my appreciation for this opportunity to address the Men's Association of the Temple Emanu-El on a subject which has been very close to my heart ever since I entered the American School of Oriental Research in Jerusalem as a student in the winter of 1932. It was at that time that I formed certain views about Palestine and Zionism which I have held to and which from time to time I have expressed, with some modifications, ever since. In recent months, however, the political conditions in Palestine have deteriorated in an alarming manner, and the situation has become very difficult and confused. Added to that, there has been a steadily widening divergence of views between Britain and the United States as to the best solution of the question.

With the idea that the United States would offer only advice and no concrete help, the British Government has been very impatient towards representations made to her by her old ally on this matter, and in fact has not always been even courteous. If Palestine were a part of the British Empire, and if we were certain that the British taxpayer would authorize for an indefinite period grants for the maintenance of an armed force equal to the preservation of order, we might ignore the American attitude. But Palestine is not a part of the Empire. Britain is there as a trustee, or as a so-called Mandatory Power, and was answerable to the League of Nations before its dissolution.

And through a special agreement entered into with the United States in 1924, Britain undertook also to consult her in matters affecting the destiny of Palestine, though the U.S.A. was never a member of the [illegible]. And, furthermore, [illegible] the seat of political [illegible] provide funds [illegible] for its economic development and social welfare. It seems therefore of paramount importance that Britain and the United States should cooperate towards a solution of the problem.

Conversely, it has been felt by many observers that if the Anglo-Saxon powers fail to collaborate towards a settlement of this problem the prospects are dim that they will collaborate in other efforts, for any length of time. Palestine, therefore, is a problem in itself that will require an almost superhuman degree of sagacity and forbearance to solve. But beyond that it will test the sincerity of the desire of nations for peace and their readiness to work together for it.

In my treatment of this subject I propose to set forth what seem to me to be the salient facts in the case, in their chronological sequence. In this way I will endeavour to anticipate questions that might be on your minds in respect to Palestine and Zionism and answer them.

As you all know, when the First World War broke out, Palestine was a part of the Turkish Empire, as was also the greater part of the peninsula of Arabia. During that war Britain entered into secret negotiations with the Arabs. She promised to support Arab nationalist hopes in exchange for Arab help. The negotiations were held in 1916, and I believe (though I am not quite sure of this) while the Gallipoli action was being fought. They were not productive of any real results, however, until considerably later.

In November 1917, when the Palestine action was well advanced, Britain struck a more direct blow at Germany, aiming at the morale of the people on the home front, by seeking to alienate German Jews, and to win over their support. This blow against Germany was the publication of the now famous Balfour Declaration, on November 2nd, 1917.

Up to that time Zionism had its strength principally in Continental Europe, and notably in Germany. The Balfour Declaration led Zionists to give their loyalty and support to the British, and one might say "Anglo-Saxon" nations. Zionism, [illegible] in view of present events it is a matter of highest importance to keep this clearly in mind, made a definite transfer of its loyalty, and became, as it were, a firm ally and a partner of Britain on account of the promise contained in the Balfour Declaration, namely that His Majesty's Government would, upon the conclusion of peace, take steps to establish a Jewish National Home in Palestine.

Well, the alienation of German Jews from their Fatherland is said to have led to a decline in German [illegible] on the Home Front and to [illegible] effort. Owing to the very nature of this statement it is very difficult to prove and to document. But, however that might be, the Germans themselves never forgave the Jews for their reaction to the Balfour Declaration. It is the principal cause of the implacable hatred that the Nazis felt towards them.

In course of time the Balfour Declaration was accepted by fifty-one nations in the world. It was confirmed by the League of Nations. It was embodied in the very Law of the Mandate under which Palestine was to be administered, by Britain. To the Jews, therefore, the Balfour Declaration has a fuller significance than it has to any race in the world. It has a double significance. It was in part the sinister cause of much of the horror that they have suffered in Germany; it has been also the hope of remedy for their plight and of escape from the suffering that it led to.

Meantime, to their Arab allies in the First World War the British were more than generous. The Sherif Hussein, representing the most distinguished family in Arabia, was given the Hedjaz as a Kingdom; to the Emir Feisal, his son, Syria was awarded, but when this grant was resisted by the French, he was given the Kingdom of Iraq and was crowned in Baghdad. As if that were not enough, Palestine itself was then divided into two portions, one to the West of the Jordan River and the other to the East, and the eastern section, (now termed Transjordan) was ceded to the Arabs under Emir Abdullah, another son of Hussein.

It should never be forgotten that it was by force of British arms, and by the superior military genius of a British soldier, Allenby, that this whole area was wrested from the Turk. Everyone knows of the exploits of Lawrence of Arabia and his desert clansmen, but no one supposes that they contributed materially to the victory won by the British. Yet when the peace settlement was made the Arabs emerged as the important beneficiaries of the war. Indeed, Lloyd George is reported to have made the remark that of all the people who participated in the First World War the Arabs gained most. In Syria their hope was temporarily deferred. It was put under French Mandate. And in the little strip of Palestine west of the Jordan, a tiny little fraction of the immense area claimed under the various titles by Arabs, and rather less than half of Palestine itself, the claim of our Arab Allies and friends was to be modified so as to make possible the fulfilment of the Balfour promises.

I have gone over all this familiar ground at some length. I have done so for two reasons. First, because I believe that the Balfour Declaration, embodied in the Law of the Mandate, is one of the first achievements in the evolution of a constitutional law which is international in scope. It represents a definite advance in the effort to regulate international affairs by law. It has been also a new experiment in statecraft for the British people.

There was no people so well-fitted to undertake this experiment as the British were. Added to their experience in all parts of the world, there was the political liberalism, tried and proved over and over again, which had enabled Britain progressively to lead the members of its vast commonwealth in the direction of fuller autonomy and self-government. In the second place, I have reviewed the settlements made with Arabs and with Jews, because pressure groups both in the Levant and also in Anglo-Saxon countries have been formed so as to modify those settlements again in favor of the Arabs. It is, therefore, most urgent that the Balfour Declaration and the Law of the Mandate should be re-affirmed by the United Nations Organization, with as little delay as possible, if conditions in Palestine are not to deteriorate beyond all repair.

[illegible] the foundations of the new society and state were being laid in Palestine, but Jewish immigration was slow. In fact, Jewish immigration into the U.S.A. was far quicker. During this first decade there were some acts of violence on the part of Arabs in protest against Jewish immigration and the new order. However, violence was sporadic and unorganized.

Circumstances changed, however, in the 'thirties. First, the great flood of migration to the U.S.A. was reduced to a mere trickle. Second, Jewish Colonies and industries in Palestine were making remarkable progress and were demonstrating the economic potentiality and capacity of Palestine. In other words, Jewish effort under a beneficent British government, was proving that the dream of Zionism, so long thought to be a mere chimera of religious piety and imagination, could be realized. Finally, the great factor that contributed to Jewish immigration was the struggle between Communism and Fascism for control of Central Europe that ended in the temporary success and victory of Fascism, and the advent of Hitler to power.

These three factors together were responsible for a great increase in Jewish immigration into Palestine and a renewed development in Palestine, which affected every phase of life. Political, economic, social, educational and philanthropic. The upsurge of life and endeavour brought benefit to every principal class of Palestinian society without exception. There were social changes, it is true, which were potentially dangerous. Perhaps these social changes took place at that period rather too quickly. I refer to the effects on many individuals here and there through the transition of Palestine from an agricultural economy to a more balanced economy of agriculture and industry.

Let me explain this: Palestine was, under Turkish rule, exclusively agricultural in its economy and its people wrung only a scant living from the soil. Under the Mandate agriculture has not suffered. Far from it. Agriculture has expanded both through the reclamation of desert land and also through employment of scientific methods for the more intensive cultivation of the soil. But as industries were established in Palestine, many Arabs were ready to sell their farms (at the fairest and best prices that were to be had, and that means to Jewish purchasers) and to enter the factories as labourers. Thus people who for generations, almost from time immemorial, had been peasants or almost serfs on the land, found themselves in a new role and with a new status.

Now, from all the reports that I have been able to obtain I am firmly of the belief that Labour enjoys a high degree of security in Palestine, and as far as I know Arab labour as such has not been responsible for anti-Jewish demonstrations. Yet I must repeat what I was saying. The great transition in Palestine from an exclusively agrarian economy to a more balanced economy was effected with such rapidity, that while it benefitted the country as a whole, and both races together, yet it did bring hardship to individuals here and there.

There is another aspect of the great development during the 'thirties that must in all fairness be alluded to. It is this. In comparison with their Arab neighbours, and in competition with them, the Jewish colonists and farmers enjoyed important advantages. They were backed by very generous support from Zionist sources which enabled them to apply scientific methods and machinery to a degree quite impossible to the Arab. This fact is revealed in a most startling way in the evidence submitted to the Anglo-American Committee of Inquiry set up recently to study the present chaotic condition of the [illegible] that of milk obtained from cows on Arab farms, and the production of eggs per hen on Jewish farms is roughly two and a half times as great. What is the explanation of these remarkable differences?

The explanation is simply that Jewish farmers have had the intelligence and the financial means to import pedigreed livestock. Similarly, with improved crop rotation, seed selection, the use of fertilizers, and mechanized equipment in place of the old ox-drawn plough, the Jewish farmer obtains roughly from two to two and a half times as much from an acre of land than does his Arab neighbour. Let me repeat then: the production of Arab farms is greater now than it was in those days when the land was under Turkish administration. Arab farmers are beginning to benefit from improved agricultural methods. But progress is slow, and compared with Jewish farms, most of the Arab farms are still poorly cultivated. (In passing, I might remark, that the suggestion has already been made that this disparity between the Jewish and Arab farmers might be mitigated and remedied by help provided by the Government in co-operation with the U.S.A.)

Now, as a result of these two factors which I have been describing, namely, the suffering imposed upon some individuals through the change in the economy of the country, and the dissatisfaction of some Arab farmers at the more rapid progress of the Jews were responsible for some unrest in the earlier 'thirties. It was only, however, in the middle 'thirties that Arab unrest began to take a violent and organized form. People who are partial to the Arabs explain the organized sabotage and violence and terrorism in 1936-1939 as a legitimate bid for self-determination.

However, historians are hardly likely to take this narrow and one-sided view. They will hardly forget that this organized militant terrorism, conducted by the Arabs under the direction of the Grand Mufti, and which actually required the siege and recapture of Jerusalem itself by British troops, was timed to coincide with events in other quarters of most ominous portent. Of these events, which include the Ethiopian War, the Spanish Civil War, the War of Nerves, perhaps the most important of all was the failure of the League of Nations to impose sanctions upon Italy in her wanton attack upon Ethiopia, a fellow member of the League.

This affected the situation in Palestine in an immediate and profound manner. For it was the League of Nations and its Law of the Mandate that were foundations of the new Constitution in Palestine. If the League were to become invalid, could not the Mandate and the Balfour Declaration be disannulled? If they were disannulled, and the very basis in international law that legitimatised Britain's rule in Palestine swept away, what would remain to support the Palestine experiment? This is not a private view of my own. It is a view expressed by no less a person than the Lord Chancellor in a debate in the House of Commons on March 9th, 1940, on the subject of the White Paper. I repeat his words:

"The Mandate is our right and

title to be in Palestine, and our sole right and sole title to have anything to do with this problem at all. . . . I should be surprised if the Attorney-General can say with conviction that the policy is not a violation of the law."

Obviously, with all the sanctions gone there would be nothing left but the power of each element, Jew, Arab and Briton, to impose its will by force on the others, and a thoroughly Machiavellian spirit would be given free play.

What actually happened at that time? Now, this is a point of great importance for the understanding of the present situation in Palestine. Great Britain was confronted with the challenge of Arab terrorists. She was confronted with the supreme question as to whether she would follow Principle or be governed by Expediency; whether she would bow to the threats of Arab terrorists or submit the question to the League of Nations; whether she would stand firmly upon the sanctions and Law of the Mandate or compromise. Actually she did compromise in the issuing of the so-called White Paper. This reduced Jewish immigration drastically, reduced it to a total of 1,500 a month (to take effect as soon as the immigration visas already granted were exhausted) and prohibited the transfer of land by Arabs to the Jews. Considering the heroic part that Britain played during the War, when standing alone under the leadership of Churchill, she decided to despatch a strong expedition to Egypt, and calling to remembrance those epic actions under Wavell, Alexander and Montgomery when Tobruk was taken and lost and taken again and lost again, and recollecting that terrible apprehension that all the world felt as Rommel brought up his armour to El-Alamein for his final assault on Alexandria, I can say that it is not in my heart to blame Britain for the White Paper in 1939.

Nor is it, I believe, in the heart of right-minded Jewish people to feel bitterness and resentment for it at that time. My friends, Britain has, since the promulgation of the White Paper, written a chapter of history which eclipses all the victories of Alexander and Caesar and Napoleon, and the glory of which shall never grow dim.

But this fact remains! In issuing the White Paper, Britain acted as if she were no longer responsible to the League of Nations, nor to the terms of the Mandate, nor to the Balfour Declaration. This White Paper has nowhere been denounced in more vigorous language than it has by British statesmen. It has drawn criticism from Zionists; it has drawn criticism from Christians in the United States and elsewhere. But no critic has used stronger language than the Rt. Honorable Herbert Morrison, [illegible] the present Government. I quote the words he used in the course of the Debate on the White Paper in 1939:

"We regard this White Paper and the policy in it as a cynical breach of the pledges given to the Jews and the world, including America. . . . It comes at a time of tragedy and apprehension for the Jewish race throughout the world. . . . It is not only a British matter but one for the international conscience of the world. If we do this thing today we shall have done a thing which is dishonourable to our good name."

We come now to the last phase in the evolution of the problem of Palestine, namely the outburst of violent and organized terrorism on the part of Jewish extremists. The incidents are so recent, (in fact, they are still occurring), and so much space has been devoted to them both in the news and editorial columns of our daily papers that little need be said by me on this score. There is no doubt at all in my mind that the outrages have done a terrible disservice to the cause which they were supposed to further.

I have tried to labour this point throughout this address: That the new venture in international statescraft in Palestine was built upon a solid foundation of law. It is of tremendous importance that all parties should recognize that, and affirm their acceptance of it. Jewish extremists are showing contempt for that law, and are seeking to set it aside. By so doing they have joined their strength to that of those Arabs who never did accept the Balfour Declaration and the Mandate, and who have always been ready to agitate against them. Thus they are joining with the foes of true Zionism.

For Zionism, as I understand it, is a religious and political faith (not one, nor the other, but both) that is its very nature and essence is international and universal. It derives its life and inspiration from the past, from Torah and Talmud, but at the same time, (as I have endeavoured to show) there is a life-cord that connects it with international society which is slowly forming, inevitably forming, before our eyes.

There is, in fact, no society that is so truly emblematic of the new international order than is the infant state in Palestine, which three faiths, the three great monotheistic faiths, recognize as their Holy Land. Zionism, I believe, will serve only as that life-cord remains intact. The metaphor of a life-cord I must admit is not the most apposite in this case, because after birth in ordinary life, the life-cord is severed. But the life-cord that I conceive of is one by which the life and inspiration of both international society and Zionism may be infused into one another.

If this ideal is to become a reality, it will remand co-operation of all groups and people who are ready once and for all to forswear violence and war, and who will rule their actions by international sanctions and law. Is this too much to expect? With the failure of the League of Nations have men become incurably pessimistic and cynical? Or should we not take the view that with the experiences of the past we are now better qualified to avoid the errors and to take the measures that will lead to success?

The real issue that we have been considering is not merely a local one, the problem of Palestine, nor even exclusively an international one, for the United Nations Organization. Transcending these, it is a human and a moral one. It is whether in this era of Science and of Power made available by science, we are going to consent tacitly or actively to the overthrow of all idealism, of all morality and of all true religion, or whether we shall all work together to realize a [illegible] on earth among men of [illegible]

HOW TO EQUIP JEWS FOR LEADERSHIP TO BE DISCUSSED

Judge Simon H. Rifkind of the Federal District Court, Mrs. Felix M. Warburg and Alan M. Stroock, members of the board of directors of the Jewish Theological Seminary, issued a joint call for a conference to consider the need for a University of Judaism that will strengthen the Jewish community in America by training leaders and workers and encouraging studies and research in every aspect of Jewish life.

The one day convention at the Seminary in New York on November 10, is being arranged by the Seminary in cooperation with the Rabbinical Assembly and the United Synagogue. The Solomon Schechter award will be conferred on an outstanding American in recognition of service to American Jewry.

The question of how to equip American Jews for the spiritual leadership once held by now virtually extinct European communities, will be discussed. Plans for the conference include an expert survey of the extent of damage to Jewish cultural and spiritual institutions on the Continent.

In his message calling the conference, Judge Rifkind said: "During my stay in Europe, in the Displaced Persons Centers, and since my return, I have been haunted [illegible] known to many of us, especially young and old, are passing through a severe psychological crisis. Subject to pressures from without, they often lack understanding of Judaism necessary to give them inner strength and courage in facing life's crisis. They are in no danger of becoming displaced persons such as I saw in Europe. But I could not help thinking that many of them are spiritually dislocated, which is almost as bad."

Palestine Extremists Threaten "War Everywhere"

A letter purportedly from Irgun Zvai Leumi, Jewish extremist organization, informed Premier de Gasperi that it had caused the blast in the British Embassy in Rome.

A similar statement to the press announced that the attack on the British Embassy, which wrecked one wing, marked the opening of "the Jewish military front in the Diaspora." The Diaspora includes lands inhabited by Jews outside Palestine. Both documents were dated November 2.

The statement to the press follows:

"The supreme command of Irgun Zvai Leumi in Ereta Israel communicates:

(a) In the night of Thursday, sixth of Cheavan 5707, troops of Irgun Zvai Leumi attacked offices of the British Embassy in Rome, which is one of the centers of anti-Jewish intrigues and the principal executor of operations aimed at strangling the repatriation of Jews. The building with its offices collapsed. All our soldiers returned to their bases with all their arms.

(b) To avoid victims among the Italian population, our troops used special precautionary measures. The attack was carried out at a suitable hour of the night; warning signs were placed at all approaches to the block occupied by the Embassy and the few passers-by were warned by word of mouth.

(c) The soldiers of Irgun Zvai Leumi, pioneers of the war for liberation of the Jewish people, will continue to fight against the British, who are trying to make slaves of them. The attack against the British Embassy in Rome marks the opening of the Jewish military front in the Diaspora.

"Britain has declared a war of extermination against our people in the whole world. The British, who occupy our country, should therefore know that the armed arm of the Eternal People will reply with war everywhere and by all means until our ravaged country is freed and our people redeemed.

"May God help us.

"Irgun Zvai Leumi."

The letter to Premier de Gasperi is addressed to him through Foreign Minister Pietro Nenni. It begins:

"Faithful to our military tradition, we have the honor of making known to Your Excellency and through you to the whole of the Italian people that Irgun Zvai Leumi is responsible for the attack on the British Embassy in Rome, carried out during the night of Thursday, October 31."

It states that the Italian people can forgive the annoyance they suffered as a result of this step only if they fully understand the causes that motivated it.

The letter then explains the purpose of Irgun Zvai Leumi, which it defines as "war for the liberation of our country from foreign domination and redemption of the Jewish people."

The last part of the letter is a direct appeal to the Italian people. It says in part:

"Your country has been transformed by the British into a base of their operations against the Jewish people. Along your coasts British sleuths have been posted to eliminate repatriation of the Jews. Your cities are infested with British agents who spy upon Jewish refugees.

"So the British embassy in Rome, which directs all these activities, has been transformed into one of the centers of anti-Jewish intrigues, into a center of action to smother the return of Jews and to maintain a blockade.

"The behavior of the oppressors' Government in Erets Israel and the activity of British agents in Italy and other countries shows clearly that Britain has declared a war of destruction against the whole Jewish people.

"Is it any wonder, therefore, that the Jewish people, this eternal people, should widen the front of their war? The attack on the British embassy in Rome marks the beginning of a widening of the Jewish military front outside Erets Israel."

After stating that the Jewish people will continue their war against the British by all means in their power till final victory is achieved, the letter ends:

"We firmly believe that we shall not remain alone in this just war of ours and that we shall have allies who will help us in our struggle. We wish to believe that the Italian people will not oppose us and that when the day comes Italy will be one of the allies of the independent Jewish State.

"Until then, help the Jewish people, who are themselves against British tyranny and who are fighting for their very existence."

Palestine is not 'alleged.' It is a sad and incontrovertible fact.

"The Jewish refugees are still languishing in detention camps abroad. The Administration's efforts on their behalf and in behalf of the just rights of the Jews in Palestine, to which the Democratic party stands committed by its own national party platform, and to which the Congress of the United States has given its overwhelming endorsement as recently as a year ago, have consisted so far only of public statements of approval.

"Dr. Wise ought to be as deeply disappointed over the Administration's failure to secure results as are a majority of the Jews of America. He should be concerned enough with the increasingly desperate plight of Jewish refugees to give his hearty approval to our demands for action, even if this should prove embarrassing to the Democratic party.

"At the polls, American citizens, regardless of race or creed, can [illegible] become American citizens in the sense that other people from Western Europe have. They think only of preserving the Jewish traditions, the Jewish way of life, and worst of all, the Jewish bloodlines."

"The fight has begun," Burke declared, "and we are going to make it hotter and hotter until you go back to the Bronx, where you came from, and I say one day we are going to march into the Bronx."

Superintendent Hildebrand has charged that the Atlanta organization is one of four powerful Columbian movements in the U. S., all of them linked under a common banner. The others, he said, are in New York, Gary, Ind., and Philadelphia.

Commentaries

By Dr. Harry J. Stern, Rabbi

Changes In Rabbinical Leadership

Our world is certainly experiencing rapid changes these days and so is our Montreal Jewish community as is evidenced in the local rabbinate. Some of our rabbis who have served Montreal Jewry for many years are now on the move.

We think of such colleagues as Rabbi Julius Berger, former minister and founder of Congregation Shaare Zion, who, for nearly twenty-five years, labored here and is about to locate now in the keystone state of the Union. Then there is Rabbi Gershon Levi who was associated with Congregation Shaar Hashomayim, who is about to take a post in educational work in the United States. Both of these men have distinguished themselves in the Canadian Chaplaincy Service. And but a little over a year ago there came to our community two young rabbis, Joseph Karasick who led the oldest Jewish Congregation, Shearith Israel (Spanish and Portuguese), and Avraham Soltes who was head of the local Hillel Foundation. Both of these have now pulled up stakes and left us.

We think the leaving of these men is a spiritual loss to our community. Each and every one contributed in his own way to the spiritual and cultural treasury of our communal life. We wish them well in their respective new posts.

At this time too, we express our deep regret that the Dean of the English-speaking rabbis of Montreal, the revered Dr. Herman Abramowitz, who has served Canadian Jewry for over forty years, is now incapacitated by illness. We wish for him a speedy restoration to normal good health.

And now we speak a word of welcome to new colleagues who have come to labor in our community, namely Rabbi Samuel Cass, Rabbi Wilfred Shuchat and Rabbi Maurice Cohen. We hope their endeavours will yield them and the community a spiritual harvest: Yeyasher Kochachem.

War And Peace

In observance of Remembrance Day, which occurs next Monday, our thoughts turn to [illegible] on war and peace. What is [illegible] Jews in war and peace? What is their [illegible]

[illegible] by might nor by power but by My spirit, saith the Lord. Of course, here we must underscore the fact that this prophetic ideal did become the conviction of the Jew with the final destruction of the Jewish state. For in the tragedy of the destruction the Jewish people, out of painful and bitter national experience, learned once for all the futility and fatality of war.

Regarding war and human nature there are two points of view. There is a school of thought which says that man by nature is peace-loving. But the other school, led by such an exponent as John Carter, teaches unhesitatingly that man is war-inclined. The world will only escape war and have peace, so believes Carter, when man has ceased, has become extinct, for man inherently is war-conditioned. Most of us may be in disagreement with the teachings of John Carter but all will agree that, be the nature of man war-inclined or no, man, under whatever inherent circumstances, must be nurtured in the cause of brotherhood and peace.

Israel as a people, early, very early, was taught in the ways of peace. The earliest direction in this regard is found in the Decalogue: "Thou shalt not murder." The Jewish prophets dreamed of international peace. Isaiah's peace policy is rooted in righteousness. All peace treaties of modern times find their inspiration in the visions of Isaiah and Micah. Surely Israel's most unique contribution to civilization is to be found in the prophetic concept of international peace.

No other word seems to be so precious in the Hebrew language as that of Shalom. Psalmist and sage all speak of the urgency of Shalom, peace in the world. Peace, teach the Talmudic rabbis, must be constantly pursued. It cannot be had merely for wishing it. They advocated that the creation of peace among men towers above all other commandments. In this regard we recall the apt admonition of Rabbi Hillel of Golden Rule fame: "Be of the disciples of Aaron, loving peace and pursuing peace." We recall, too, the wise sayings of Rabbi Simon ben Gamaliel who keenly observed that the world has its foundations upon truth, justice and peace. Even the name of God was designated as "Shalom" in order to designate the greatness of peace.

The Jewish prayerbook is famed for its sublime peace petitions. "Grant us peace, and enable Israel to be a messenger of peace unto the peoples of the earth." Such a prayer is uttered by Jews throughout the world daily. Yes, for the past two thousand years our people have sought but one kind of armament — moral armament.

While the Jew by nature is endowed with the same human instincts and impulses that either are pacific or militant, it cannot be denied that for a long period of time the education of the Jew was away from martial tendencies. In the ghetto period the Jew was denied mediaeval knighthood in the arts of militarism. Instead, the Jewish mind and heart was nourished by Bible and Talmud. Hence "mental battles" and "wars of ideas" were carried on behind closed ghetto walls by Jews. The war-like instincts were thus not formed into activity.

On the other hand, when political emancipation was granted the Jew, he insisted on equality of service in the army of the respective state of which he was a free citizen. Thus the Jew fought valiantly on every field of battle and shed his blood freely in the course of loyalty and patriotism. In World War II, one [illegible] two hundred thousand Jews served in the armies of the United Nations. But with all that Jews have been the greatest of [illegible] appearing in modern times. We need think only of such [illegible] as Ivan Bloch, Zamenhof, Tobias Asser and Fried. Once

He stressed that the Zionist movement must stand on the proposition that it is not an immigration or a refugee movement, but a movement to rebuild the Jewish state for the Jewish nation.

Dr. Silver characterized the decision of the Jewish Agency Executive in Paris last August that it was prepared to discuss a proposal for the establishment of a "viable Jewish state in an adequate area of Palestine" as an error of judgment. He said that to question the judgment of the executive was not to challenge the authority of the Jewish Agency, explaining that the executive was only an instrumentality of the Jewish Agency, charged with carrying out its policies. He asserted that the executive had not consulted either the smaller or the larger Actions Committee of the Zionist movement that alone have the authority to act for the Zionists in the interim between congresses.

"When the executive of the Jewish Agency," he added, "acted on partition in Paris there was but one binding Zionist policy to guide it—the one which was reaffirmed as late as August, 1945, by the post-war Zionist conference in London, and this policy was opposed to partition. There is no other, and there will be no other, until the world Zionist Congress alters or revises it. When and if it does, it will be binding upon everyone who recognizes and accepts its authority."

A goal of 1,000,000 members for the Zionist Organization of America by 1950 was set by its newly elected national executive committee which voted also to raise $1,000,000 for expansion of a program of public relations and education in the coming year.

Another adopted resolution called on American Jews to support the economic structure of the Jewish community of Palestine and to provide a market for Palestinian products. It declared that "parallel with our efforts to achieve political freedom for Jewish Palestine we must support the economic structure of the Jewish community of Palestine, to provide additional opportunities for all new immigrants."

The meeting also mapped plans to strengthen the general Zionist wing of the movement in the U.S. and abroad.

myths," Mr. Sulzberger said:

"I fear that there are places in Europe in which no sensitive Jew of this generation can live content. In my judgment, it will not be possible for them to readjust psychologically to environments polluted by so many crimes, or to former neighbors corrupted as the witnesses of so many wrongs."

Addressing himself to the plight of the Jewish refugee, the worst sufferer as a group but a minor percentage among displaced persons, Mr. Sulzberger said he got from Rabbi Philip S. Bernstein of Rochester, U.S., adviser on Jewish affairs to Gen. Joseph T. McNarney, an over-all total estimate of between 300,000 and 350,000.

With most of them desirous of going to Palestine, Mr. Sulzberger declared that the entry of even the maximum figure would not find the Arabs outvoted and that Arab objections might have been removed with an assurance of sovereignty.

But the clamor for statehood, Mr. Sulzberger asserted, "introduced an insoluble political element into a manageable, social and economic problem.

"I cannot rid myself of the feeling," he added, "that the unfortunate Jews of Europe's D.P. Camps are helpless hostages for whom statehood has been made the only acceptable ransom."

"I acknowledge," he continued, "that those who view Jews as a race instead of as a faith, and a faith only, as I do, have reasons for national aspirations which I do not share.

"I acknowledge that those to whom a Jewish state has been a life-long goal can be expected to pursue it even when the costs are high, but it seems to me that the costs of statehood today in terms of human suffering are greater than people can be asked to bear."

There were, Mr. Sulzberger said, countless Arabs "who would admit that there is room at the moment in Palestine for 350,000 Jewish refugees, but not room for a Jewish state."

Mr. Sulzberger said he was opposed to political Zionism not solely because of the fate of Jewish refugees but because he disliked the "coercive methods" of Zionists in the U.S. who use economic means to silence those with differing views.

"We in the United States should open our doors to persons of all faiths and creeds. France seeks new citizens and they are at her door clamoring for entry. England, historic refuge for oppressed nationals, can take its share. Admitting that the Jews of Europe have suffered beyond expression, why in God's name should the fate of all these unhappy people be subordinated to the single cry of statehood?"

Mr. Sulzberger closed with a tribute to Adolph S. Ochs, who, he said, "contributed more than any man I know to molding into a responsible press the free press granted in the First Amendment of our Constitution."

combat with all the resources at their own disposal the criminal activities of gangs which not only terrorize British authorities but Palestine Jews as well."

This spokesman said the perpetrators of bombings and mine incidents "outlaw themselves from the organized community."

A blunt warning that "any attempt to halt our war will serve as a challenge for the launching of civil war" was given by the Fighters for the Freedom of Israel, the Stern group, in letters addressed to all members of the Zionist Inner Council, which condemned political violence and urged Palestine Jews to isolate terrorist groups.

The text of the warning, which consisted mainly of treatise on the Stern band's extremist political philosophy, was circulated among foreign correspondents.

The statement, typewritten in Hebrew, declared that if the Inner Council's resolution was designed to make tranquil the Jewish community and was enforced as such it would never achieve that objective. "On the contrary," the statement said, "if our brothers attack us, our reply will be blows at the enemy (the British) such as have never yet been delivered and unrestrained, merciless warfare because he will have to share in causing civil strife. The decision is now in your hands."

Strauss, Paul Hymans, Salmon Levinson, and Albert Einstein.

War is no cure for the tragedy of the Jew or the tragedy of the present world. War doesn't cure anything. Unless we remove the causes which make for war, mankind is doomed. The nations of the world must learn to settle their complaints at conference tables. The satisfied peoples must sacrifice much to help the unsatisfied. There must be give and take on all sides. A United States of the World will some day be realized. What failed at Geneva must be tried as it is now being tried again by the United Nations Assembly. This has been the Messianic dream of the Jew and of the Christian. This is the goal of both Judaism and Christianity.

THE HUNTER—a Conservationist

The hunter, too, becomes a conservationist if he adheres rigidly to bag limits, kills destructive animals and birds whenever possible and respects the forest laws regarding camp fires, etc.

Over the cool, sun streaked marsh — a breath-taking whir-r-r . . . heralds their coming. 'RED HEADS', twin symbols of brilliance and grace, sweep overhead — are gone. But conservation measures will ensure their return, year after year, in increasing numbers.

*"Sanctuaries have been established, many of them being marshy lakes which restore former breeding and resting places . . . By assisting the agencies whose efforts are directed towards conservation everyone of us can have a part in the preservation of Canada's water-fowl."
